The movie stars Danny DeVito, Annette Bening, Minnie Driver, Lili Taylor, and Wil Wheaton, and follows the lives of a mad scientist and his daughter and granddaughter. The movie was made on a budget of around $12 million, and grossed $68 million in North America and another $55 million overseas, for a total of $123 million. He is very protective of them and tries to keep them from exposing his loneliness. He often makes inappropriate remarks towards the younger daughter, Regan. When Regan is young, her mother makes Regan's paternal grandfather, her father, marry her, a decision that FitzGerald adamantly opposes. After FitzGerald's wife dies of breast cancer, he finds a new woman, Esther Hill, who is not much older than he is and makes plans to marry her. After the father/daughter marriage, Emmett continues to socialize with his daughters and he meets Esther Hill, who is, like him, a widower. Regan is both attracted to and hates her mother's new husband.

When the girls' school principal, Mrs. Steinberg, finds out that Regan is still a virgin, she advises FitzGerald that he ought to have sex with his daughter. FitzGerald has a science experiment, an end-of-the-world device, set up in the basement and the results are disastrous. Esther Hill, who believes that her husband has been having an affair, is devastated by the news. Regan is afraid that she may die as well. FitzGerald, meanwhile, develops a reverse-midlife-crisis obsession with Esther Hill. When his daughters' school arranges a fund-raising trip to Ireland, he takes them to a cliff near St. Joseph, Mo. He sets up a little ghost town and reveals his end-of-the-world machine to them, using it as a scare tactic. Regan and her mother look on in horror as FitzGerald gets a message to their father.
